

The Hero's Path

Are you ready to face the guilt, fear and the remorse? Are you ready to enter the house of fire, ready to suffer the loss? Are you ready to feel the shame, prepared to think insane? Are you ready to kill the ferocious beasts, the two that are the same? Are you ready to face the wolves, who call from the mountaintop? Willing to make the climb, though doubt may want you to stop. Are you willing to climb the mountain, then makes its awesome descent? Willing to find that innocence, and do it without relent. Are you willing to be that hero, for not power or greed or the like. Are you willing to wait for the ashes to bring in this age of new light. For this is the path of destruction to end the powers who reign, and here lies the path of true hero's who are called to face up to that pain.

Those Who Take on the World Raise Themselves
While Those Who Take on Themselves Raise The World!

"Just sometimes I cannot see the Mountain
When clouds keep it from sight
Sometimes I feel so damn lonely
I guess it's just my fear of height."

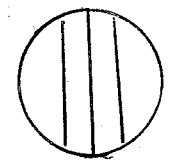

Enlightened
Male and Female Finally
Unite as true equals

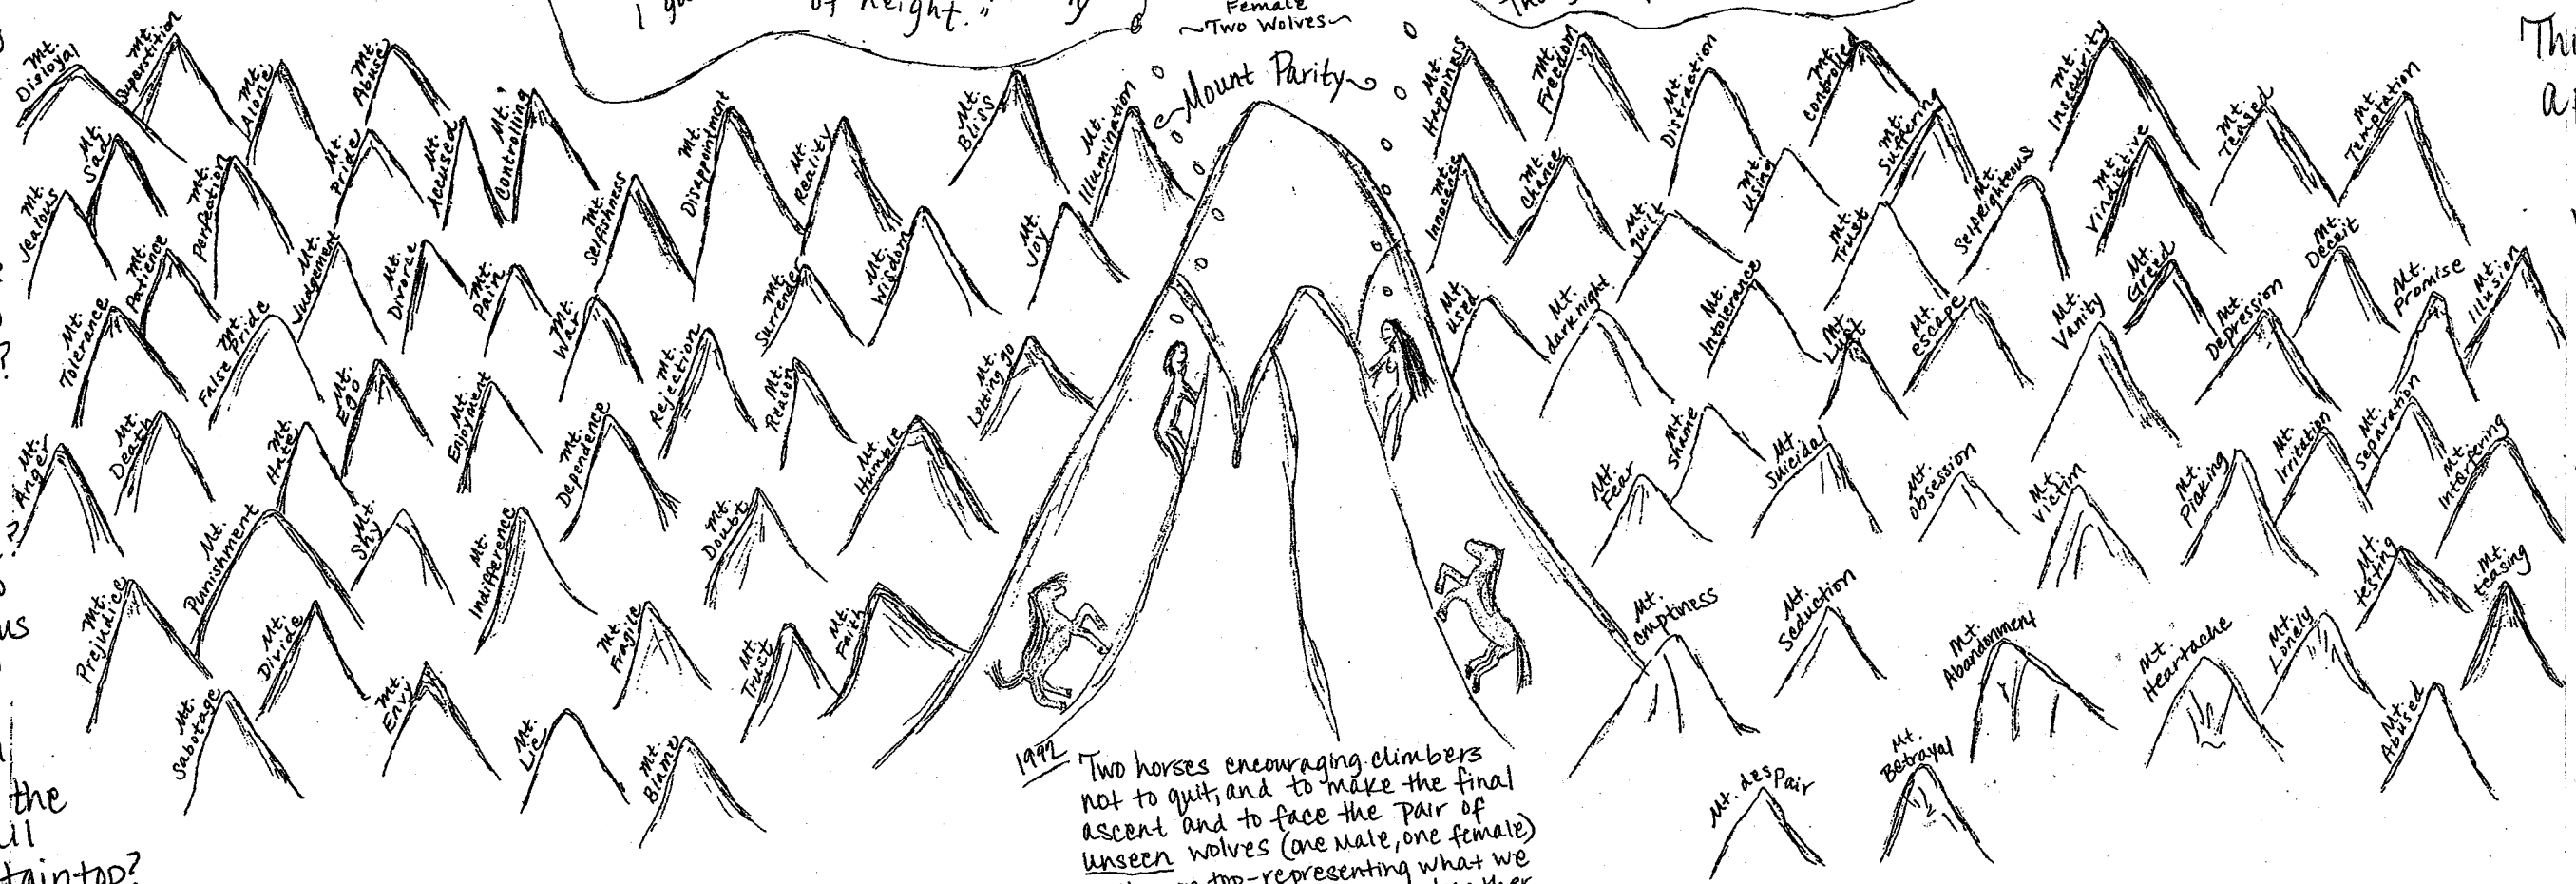

Male and Female
Two Wolves

"Life is a poem never finished
A song spoken from the grave
Sometimes I cannot see the Mountain
Though I know I go there
With the Brave."

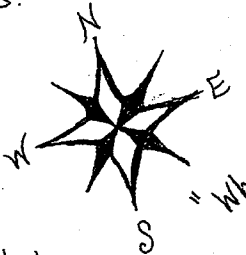

Time Makes Liars
of us All

This symbol appears in 1997 with the statement 'the path that's neither left nor right nor in the middle is the one that circles all three'

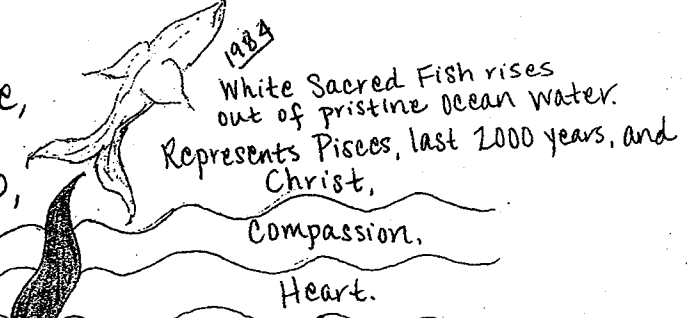

1997 Two horses encouraging climbers not to quit, and to make the final ascent and to face the pair of unseen wolves (one male, one female) waiting on top - representing what we fear, and also the coming together with our True Soul Mates.

"Where the breeze blows Silent - is where I shall build my home!"
"In a dream of morning
Last its site I
Freely Roamed."

1990 beautiful white shaggy haired, the goat is now to adult size.

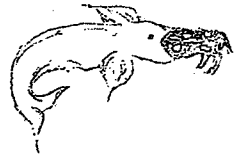

Why are we here? This is why.
To climb these Mountains to Experience Each, Gaining Wisdom and Compassion, and to finally Build our True Home.

Secret to peace of mind - Psychologically, one must kill the ferocious beasts, evil & good...

"Over Snows Pristine White
On The Highest of Plateaus
I Overlooked a Thousand Peaks
Each One I'll Come to Know..."

Sign of Capricorn

1984

On land,
Sacred fish gives birth to baby goat backing out of its mouth. It is full of fear and apprehension, much like us.
Begins, and continues to climb Life's Many mountains - so as to connect the head with the heart.

Artwork by Jainie Todd